

B
cont'd

with a pressure force applied to the electronic component against the circuit board by means of a tool (8) and heat applied from the electronic component side or heat applied from the board side or heat applied from both the electronic component side and the board side, so that the electrode of the electronic component is electrically connected with the electrode of the circuit board.